OBIETTIVI E PROGRAMMA (a cura dell'università ospitante)

Obiettivi e descrizione	The main objective of this BIP course is to disseminate knowledge about the role of women in the European cultural scene of the contemporary period. The essential motivation for our approach is to contribute to rewriting the official historical discourse on women's performance in the world of the arts, with the aim of including in the canon those women who, due to their quality, deserve to be part of it, always applying the gender perspective. To this end, the role played by women as artists will be addressed, paying attention to the specific characteristics of their training, as well as the critical and commercial reception of their work within the circuit of exhibition channels and the art market. It will deal with their artistic production, counteracting some of the simplistic stereotypes linked to women artists in relation to the genres and artistic languages they practised. The presence of women in the museum narrative will also be analysed.
Metodi e risultati	The course will feature the participation of various international specialists in the field. Their presentations will take place in two parts: a first part in lecture format, lasting 50 minutes, and a second part open to dialogue with the students, who will be able to raise their own questions and concerns. Aware of the importance of complementing these sessions with practical cases, two case studies have been programmed with the participation of professionals from two museums in the city of Zaragoza, who will share their strategies to enhance the value of female creation. In addition, there will be a demonstration session on the database of Women Artists in Spain, created as part of the research project Las Artistas en España, 1804-1939, as it is a fundamental tool for the dissemination of knowledge on the main theme of the BIP. Finally, there will be a round table to encourage debate and reflection. It will be led by women artists of diverse profiles, who will share their own experiences.

Descrizione della componente virtuale	The online programme will consist of a presentation of the course and an inaugural lecture by the renowned expert Estrella de Diego, Professor at the Complutense University of Madrid. The aim of this lecture is to introduce the subject matter of the course, addressing the state of the art of gender studies and the visual arts.

Obiettivi e descrizione	This BIP belongs to the 'RandoPat-Heritrails' series. This is a series of summer/winter schools organized within the Cultural Heritage Hub of UNITA and structured around the 'peripatetic' principle of learning by walking together (in relation to landscape): • "Intangible Cultural Heritage in Pays de Béarn", University of Pau, in 2021 • Randopat-Heritrail 1 – Mushrooms, herbs and raw food: practices and beliefs', University of Timisoara, in 2022 • Randopat-Heritrail 2: 'Sur les Chemins de Roland', University of Pau, in 2023. For this BIP we would like to pursue the study of local practices and traditions in the use of natural ingredients, in particular mushrooms. We'll have mycologists and ethnobotanists among our participants. So, this will be partly an interdisciplinary BIP, enriched by the contribution of these specialists. Furthermore, in this BIP, to take place in Serra da Estrela, we shall also include the study of the cheese and the wool crafts in the area.
Metodi e risultati	At the end of this BIP, participants will be expected to have gained a good appreciation of the aspects of Cultural Heritage of the region considered during the week. They will also be expected to have gained some notions of mycology that will both enrich their general culture and allow them to draw comparisons with the traditional uses of mushrooms in their own regions.
